Welcome to the
New Zealand Festival
To the artists and to our audiences,
we greet you

Kia ora and welcome to a New Zealand Festival journey that will blow your mind. The theme of journey runs through humankind's most powerful stories. Every culture and epoch has their own tale of quest and travel, but in the Pacific this is inextricably linked to the sea – Moananui-a-Kiwa, the mother who connects us all – and to waka – the vessels that carry life. This Festival we celebrate the epic voyages that brought people to this land, before we turn to the future and contemplate the voyages to come. From Kupe to conquistadors and Star Wars, these stories of journey will make your heart sing.

Once again, I am humbled by the immense dedication and passion that has gone into making this programme possible. A huge welcome and thank you to the artists who transform Wellington during the Festival. There are works that come to us from some of the greatest stages across the world, while others are new creations that will have their first outing here. All of them are evidence that the power of art is very much alive. As technology transforms both our environment and our inner worlds, it is inspiring to see the next generation of artists grasp this new reality and find expression for a new sense of self and purpose.

Thank you also to the Festival partners and supporters who have worked with us to make this programme possible. I look forward to sharing an incredible three weeks with you.

THE SELECT (THE SUN ALSO RISES)

Based on the novel The Sun Also Rises by Ernest Hemingway

Created and performed by Elevator Repair Service

Directed by John Collins

UNITED STATES

THEATRE / ARTIST TALK

The giddy atmosphere of 1920s Paris and Spain explodes from the stage in this unique dramatisation of Ernest Hemingway's classic first novel, The Sun Also Rises.

Set in the jazz age of post-World War I Europe, a group of lost youths drinks away the horrors of war in a quest for freedom, love and life. Hemingway's text is delivered word-for-word by the highly acclaimed New York ensemble Elevator Repair Service in an energetic, riotous, genre-defying stage performance.

"Dazzlingly free and inventive" and "profoundly intelligent" (The Scotsman), The Select (The Sun Also Rises) effortlessly rises to the challenge of its ambitions, and from this classic of American literature, a new classic of American theatre is born.

THE WETA DIGITAL SEASON OF
BARBER SHOP CHRONICLES

Fuel, National Theatre and West Yorkshire Playhouse

Written by Inua Ellams

UNITED KINGDOM
THEATRE / ARTIST TALK

Straight from its sell-out debut at London's National Theatre, Barber Shop Chronicles has audiences and critics buzzing.

This lively, life-affirming and "irresistibly joyful" (Daily Mail) portrait of the modern-day barber shop tackles the big topics – fatherhood, friendship, politics and football – against an energetic backdrop of banter, boasting and African beats.

In a universal tale that spans Johannesburg, Harare, Kampala, Lagos, Accra and London, this “flamboyant, musical, moveable feast” (The Times) captures the heart and soul of the barber shop as a place for African men to gather and talk (and talk and talk) – with some hair trimming on the side.

Barber Shop Chronicles is guaranteed great entertainment, from the heart. Take a front-row seat in an intimate theatre space within Wellington’s TSB Bank Arena and be transported to the barber shops of Africa and London. Settle in for an exhilarating night of theatre.

UNITED STATES THEATRE

What makes a house a home? Multi-award-winning theatre artist Geoff Sobelle casts his penetrating gaze over our favourite four walls in his new theatre work, co-commissioned by the New Zealand Festival.

Home is a large-scale collaborative performance that explores and explodes the relationship between a “house” and this place we call “home”. On stage, a house appears. You watch it fill room by room as generations of inhabitants move in, grow up, get old, argue, do laundry, fall in love, work and party. From solitude to riotous party, these walls contain the stuff of life.

Actor-illusionist-inventor Sobelle is known for his virtuosic works of visual theatre. Here a cast of seven actors and the live music of American folk-rock artist Elvis Perkins invite us into the rituals and relationships that create a home. This joyous meditation on our domestic selves gives you a prime spot at the family dinner table – it’s an interactive art installation with a twist.

WILD DOGS UNDER MY SKIRT

Written by Tusiata Avia
Directed by Anapela Polataivao

NEW ZEALAND
THEATRE / ARTIST TALK

Samoan New Zealander Tusiata Avia's poetry becomes a fearless and enchanting piece of theatre under the direction of Anapela Polataivao and a cast of six powerful Pasefika actresses.

Breathing provocative new life into Avia's examination and celebration of what it is to be a Samoan woman, Polataivao's direction adds "extra levels of nuance, power and dramatic sophistication" which earned her Best Director in the 2016 Auckland Theatre Awards.

Through her vivid, compelling and at times hilarious characters, Avia paints a deeply personal view of Pacific Island life and its sometimes uneasy collisions with the Kiwi way. Heart-stopping and unmissable theatre.

THEATRE

This “astonishingly assured” (The Guardian) drama comes to New Zealand following sell-out seasons at the Edinburgh Festival and London’s National Theatre.

Based on the experiences of children who lived through the 2004 Beslan school hostage crisis, Us/Them – the break-out hit show from Brussels youth theatre company BRONKS – portrays extreme events but through a child’s eyes. Despite the potentially harrowing subject matter, the experience is naively wonderful and unsettlingly funny.

Two children sketch a map onto a wide bare stage. They are intent, urgent. It has to be accurate. Part of the staggering achievement of Us/Them is that its two performers are able to start with a simple physical act of abstract map-making and open up an entire world of the mind. Thrilling, often humorous and with a deft lightness of touch.

STAR WARS: A NEW HOPE IN CONCERT

Music by John Williams

Conducted by Hamish McKeich

Movie with live score performed by the New Zealand Symphony Orchestra

UNITED STATES / NEW ZEALAND

MUSIC / FILM / FAMILY

The Oscar-winning music from Star Wars has been closely guarded for 40 years. Now, as an absolute treat for New Zealand fans, the New Zealand Symphony Orchestra will perform the music of Star Wars: A New Hope for a live screening of the original film.

Soaring trumpets blare over the movie’s opening moments: “A long time ago in a galaxy far, far away ...” Seared into the minds of generations of wonder-struck children (and adults), the music of Star Wars is central to the film’s captivating charm and popularity.

Composer John Williams' spectacular symphonic soundtrack was named the greatest film score of all time by the American Film Institute – and is arguably the most recognisable piece of orchestral music of the 20th century.

Few orchestras around the world will have this opportunity. Few fans either. This is a once-in-a-lifetime chance to experience the full power of this finely tuned, “fully operational” orchestra bringing Star Wars to life as never before. Grab your popcorn, put on your favourite Star Wars costume and be whisked away to another galaxy.

Beyond Time offers a thrilling “glimpse into other dimensions” (Broadway World) with its fusion of martial arts, tai chi, contemporary dance, bold percussion and stunning visual effects. You'll be carried off to an enthralling new universe far removed from the bustle of everyday life.

Each performance is an intense physical and spiritual journey for these artists, whose virtuosity and precision make them "consummate multitaskers: dancers who drum and drummers who dance, creating music as they move" (The New York Times).

From a dark stage, a solitary figure in white emerges, twirling to a haunting melody. Rows of dancing drummers beat a strong pattern of sound and movement. Meditative and explosive. Modern and spiritual. This remarkable work will hook you in with its powerful, hypnotic pull.

THE WELLINGTON AIRPORT SEASON OF
SWAN LAKE /LOCH NA hEALA

By Michael Keegan-Dolan

IRELAND

DANCE / THEATRE / ARTIST TALK

“A show of terrible beauty and extraordinary craft” (The Guardian), this is not Swan Lake as you know it.

Rooted in the midlands of Ireland, ancient mythology and the ills of the modern world collide in this extraordinary adaptation of the beloved classic.

Combining soaring dancing and boundary-busting theatre, song and live music, acclaimed director Michael Keegan-Dolan swaps Tchaikovsky’s original score for Irish folk music with a Nordic noir twist.

Stunning and hard-hitting, yes. Yet good things arise out of the bad, as this extraordinary, magical performance transports you along an imagined dark path towards the light and a resounding redemption.

DANCE / ARTIST TALK

Twenty-five years ago, cinema-goers around the world were captivated by an extraordinary tale of desire, violence and hope.

The story of Ada McGrath and her daughter Flora, husband Alastair and lover Baines unfolded against the wild grandeur and desolation of New Zealand, as Jane Campion's award-winning film took audiences on a visceral journey into New Zealand's imagined past as it had never been portrayed before.

Drawing on the rich inspiration of The Piano, the Royal New Zealand Ballet is honoured to stage the world premiere of this new full-length dance work by Jiří and Otto Bubeníček. Originally conceived as a short work for Dortmund Ballet, The Piano: the ballet is now reimagined and expanded for the RNZB, giving Ada's story a new and distinctively New Zealand voice and, in dance, a powerful new means of expression. Excerpts from Michael Nyman's iconic film score are blended with evocative music by Debussy, Arensky, Stravinsky, Schnittke, Brahms and Shostakovich.

"Not just about a story, or some characters, but a whole universe of feeling"

- ROGER EBERT, FILM CRITIC

OrphEus – a dance opera

By Michael Parmenter

With The New Zealand Dance Company

NEW ZEALAND / UNITED STATES / AUSTRALIA

DANCE / MUSIC / ARTIST TALK

One of New Zealand's most acclaimed choreographers, Michael Parmenter, returns to the Festival with the world premiere season of OrphEus – a dance opera, a bold new work with The New Zealand Dance Company.

Parmenter has drawn on a ravishing musical score, including Rameau and Charpentier, reflecting a period during which the ancient Greek hero invoked a harmonious cosmos and a hierarchical political order. Since then, Orpheus has come to represent art's power to transcend suffering and death.

In this richly layered, epic dance work, Parmenter brings these contending perspectives into conflict and dialogue. OrphEus confronts the power of music and voice in both the personal and the political realms, revealing, in this familiar story of love and loss, the tensions between seduction and restraint, harmony and disorder.

Combining the power of dance, live music and theatre, Parmenter's incredible vision is brought to life by The New Zealand Dance Company, performing alongside Grammy Award-winning American tenor Aaron Sheehan, baroque ensemble Latitude 37 and special guests.

Through the lens of this mythic yet deeply personal tragedy, OrphEus thrillingly stages the eternal challenge of the artist – to seek the familiar or venture into dangerous uncharted territory.

Co-produced by the New Zealand Festival, Auckland Arts Festival and The New Zealand Dance Company

“Michael Parmenter's name is synonymous with bold and innovative contemporary dance ... challenging, thought provoking and fulfilling.”- THE PRESS (UK)

GRIZZLY BEAR

UNITED STATES
MUSIC

Grizzly Bear are the cult band's cult band and are in Wellington exclusively for two shows only.

Fleet Foxes frontman Robin Pecknold proclaimed one of their releases "the best record of the Noughties". Radiohead's Jonny Greenwood declared them "my favourite band in the world."

For once, such glowing praise seems justified. Across five albums, this Brooklyn quartet has explored a dreamy, deeply psychedelic sound that's equal parts chamber music, rock, electronic effects and baroque Americana.

Offering sonic surprises galore, they regularly reduce their live audiences to tears of joy. A song that starts out painfully intimate, as if recorded in a phone booth, might end up as a "cast of thousands" affair. While the soaring voices of chief songwriters Ed Droste and Dan Rossen are interspersed with unexpected sounds – crackling fires, whispering voices flickering through the mix.

After a five-year sabbatical exploring the alternative worlds of high-end cuisine, the US campaign trail and fatherhood, they return to the stage, touring their latest album Painted Ruins. Grab your chance to submerge yourself in the Grizzly Bear sound.

DAVID BYRNE

UNITED STATES
MUSIC

From being the ultimate art school punk fronting the groundbreaking, oft-imitated band Talking Heads, David Byrne is a musical pioneer with a career spanning five decades and counting.

Lauded by David Bowie, Pink Floyd, Radiohead and more, Byrne has occupied the shattered mind of a paranoid murderer (Psycho Killer), hollered out rodeo-friendly country ballads (Road to Nowhere), devastated nightclub dance floors (Once in a Lifetime) and delivered a love song so poignant it's still regularly played at weddings (This Must Be the Place). Now he comes to Wellington to do all this and more.

A riveting live performer, Byrne has explored Brazilian and Afro-Cuban music, disco, hip hop, opera and techno, and is also an artist, writer, photographer, soundtrack composer and film director, driven forward by a restless artistic curiosity. Same as it ever was, he's unmissable.

Grammy Award – winner Cecile McLorin Salvant is the hottest voice in American jazz right now.

“You only get a singer like this once in a generation or two,” said jazz giant Wynton Marsalis, who’s such a fan of this Miami-born vocalist he hired her to front his Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra.

Channelling the sass, the sorrow and the sweeping ease of jazz’s greatest vocalists – Ella Fitzgerald, Billie Holiday, Bessie Smith, Sarah Vaughan – Salvant’s bell-clear soprano and unusually juicy bass is a new, fresh voice of its very own: rich, striking, endlessly nuanced, a straight-up heartbreaker.

With an entrancing stage presence and performance of pure emotion, she reinvigorates jazz standards – finding fresh thrills within vaudeville, the blues, gospel and folk music too. She’ll have you eating out of the palm of her hand.

MECHANICAL BALLET

Stroma with Sarah Watkins

NEW ZEALAND
MUSIC / ARTIST TALK

Drums that strike themselves. Loudspeakers that pivot and pirouette. Pianos whose keys tap-dance ghostly toccatas. Welcome to a brave new world of mechatronic music, where self-playing instruments rule.

Autonomous instruments have fascinated composers since the dawn of the mechanical age. The most famous of these is arguably Georges Antheil's epic work Ballet Mécanique [1925] – best described as The Rite of Spring meets heavy metal. In Mechanical Ballet, experience the wonder for yourself as a crowd of mechatronic loudspeakers and percussion instruments come to life – created by Wellington-based musicians/engineers Jim Murphy, Bridget Johnson and David Downes. They keep pace with percussionists from leading Kiwi new music ensemble Stroma and top New Zealand pianists Sarah Watkins and Stephen De Pledge.

This concert of virtuosic proportions features two seminal works by US minimalist icon Steve Reich, Drumming Part 1 and Piano Phase, as well as world premieres of works by composers Bridget Johnson, David Downes and Michael Norris. The future starts here.

These exhilarating qualities come to the fore in A New Zealand Partita.

Commissioned especially for De Pledge, seven New Zealand composers have written pieces inspired by JS Bach's Partita no. 3 in A minor, BWV 827. In a series of fascinating three-way conversations between composers, pianist and Bach himself – the performance includes Bach's original partita – we hear this 18th-century musical form reimagined for the 21st century.

RADICALISM AND TOLERANCE

Maajid Nawaz and Ali A Rizvi in Conversation

UNITED KINGDOM / PAKISTAN & CANADA

WRITERS & READERS

In a time of rising extremism around the world, discover first-hand why former Islamist extremist Maajid Nawaz and political commentator Ali A Rizvi are on a quest for peace and tolerance. They make their first appearance in New Zealand in conversation with John Campbell, exclusive to Writers & Readers. Nawaz (pictured) shares his experience as a young Islamist extremist in his memoir, Radical, which spurred him to found the world's first anti-radicalisation organisation, Quilliam. Rizvi is the author of The Atheist Muslim: A Journey from Religion to Reason and is a regular contributor to the Huffington Post. You can also see them on screen before the session in a free New Zealand premiere of the documentary Islam and the Future of Tolerance (see below).

This feature documentary chronicles the initial clash but ultimate collaboration of prominent atheist author and philosopher Sam Harris and former jailed radical Islamist Maajid Nawaz as they critically analyse Islam in the 21st century. UNVEILING A SPECTACULAR NEW ART GALLERY AT TE PAPA

VISUAL ARTS / FREE

Te Papa is opening a spacious new art gallery in March 2018. Spanning two levels and 3980m², the 8-metre high Toi Art gallery will feature new immersive and large-scale art, a suite of stunning new exhibitions, and iconic works from the national art collection.

Pacific Sisters: Fashion Activists

Pacific Sisters: Fashion Activists is a celebration of mana wāhine, indigenous identities and the role the Pacific Sisters collective has played over the past 26 years – through their collaborative works across fashion, performance, music and film – in giving voice and visibility to Māori and Pacific peoples in Aotearoa.

Lisa Walker:

I want to go to my bedroom but I can't be bothered

I want to go to my bedroom but I can't be bothered charts the 30-year evolution of world-renowned New Zealand jeweller Lisa Walker. From the 1980s to now, Walker has challenged convention – “Just because it's jewellery doesn't mean we have to clam up and be well-behaved.”

Kaleidoscope: Abstract Aotearoa

Abstract art is often presented as a 20th century European invention. Kaleidoscope turns that on its head and celebrates how the exploration of shape, colour and pattern have captured our imaginations in the Pacific. At its heart is a must-see new immersive commission by contemporary artist Tiffany Singh.

THE LANGUAGE OF THINGS: MEANING AND VALUE IN CONTEMPORARY JEWELLERY

VISUAL ARTS / FREE

The Language of Things reflects how meaning and value are challenged through the often-surprising materials used in contemporary jewellery from Europe, America, Asia, Australia and New Zealand. In this exhibition, visitors can expect to see everything from a necklace made of scissors to a woman covered in brass leaves and a performance of masked characters.

These curious pieces not only prompt us to consider what contemporary jewellery can be, but also the relationship between our inherent understanding of conventional jewellery and how we 'read' the materials that surround us in daily life.

GAVIN HIPKINS: THE DOMAIN

VISUAL ARTS / FREE

Gavin Hipkins: The Domain gives followers of this widely recognised artist an opportunity to see how his career has unfolded and introduces newcomers to one of New Zealand's most innovative and subversive investigations of the possibilities of photography.

Since his art school days, Gavin Hipkins has resisted being pigeon-holed as an artist making a certain kind of image. This expansive survey of his 25 years of art-making to date brings together a dramatic range of works, from substantial multi-part installations to short films to his unique collaborations with jeweller Karl Fritsch. The result is a thought-provoking and illuminating exhibition.

THIS IS NEW ZEALAND

VISUAL ARTS / FREE

New Zealand has been exhibiting at the Venice Biennale since 2001. While this declares our internationalism, some of our projects have tackled old themes of national identity, playing on the Biennale's arcane national pavilion structure. This Is New Zealand presents Venice works by Michael Stevenson, Michael Parekowhai and Simon Denny alongside earlier works made for diplomatic purposes and new projects by Bronwyn Holloway-Smith and Gavin Hipkins. It takes its title from Hugh Macdonald's spectacular three-screen movie made for Expo '70 in Osaka.

Watson offers images of the world that are not entirely familiar: "My aim is to show us the world anew, encouraging new ways of thinking about an image we take for granted." Explore this brave new world for yourself.

WOMEN AT THE FRONTLINE OF CLIMATE CHANGE IN VANUATU

Women in Vanuatu's villages around Efate, Moso and Nguna islands faced the devastating effects of the El Nino drought, and the ongoing recovery following category-five Cyclone Pam in 2015. This exhibition brings to light the risks that climate change presents to Pacific Island women and the issues we share as Pacific neighbours.

This exhibition was directed and recorded by Volunteer Service Abroad volunteers, journalist Fiona Morris and photographer Murray Lloyd as part of their volunteering assignment with UN Women's Markets for Change project, which is principally funded by the Australian Government and implemented in partnership with UNDP.
